

From classroom to community: equipping teachers for citizenship education

Onsite workshop for early childhood education and primary teachers

Tallin, 17-19 October 2024

Target audience

This workshop is addressed to early childhood education and care (ECEC) teachers and primary education teachers

Background

Education, particularly citizenship education, is vital for the development of individuals within society (European Committee on Culture and Education, 2022). It not only benefits individuals but also contributes to the welfare of society, as a whole, since it is a set of skills and knowledge that teaches individuals to act responsibly, considering not only their own interests but also those of others and the communities they belong to (European Commission, 2018). Encouraging and safeguarding young children's active participation and decision-making in society from an early age is essential and their involvement is crucial for fostering a culture of human rights, democracy, and the rule of law. During these formative years, children's sense of belonging and identity develops rapidly through their experiences, activities, and relationships with others. Therefore, it is important to integrate citizenship education from the earliest educational grades.

As educators, we have a profound responsibility to nurture the next generation of active and engaged citizens who not only have the necessary knowledge but also the skills and values to contribute positively to their communities and society as a whole. Implementing citizenship in the national curricula, has also become a policy priority at EU level, aiming to enable young people to develop self-awareness as members of a social group, and then possibly play a role and become active citizens at local, national or EU level (European Parliamentary Research Service, 2023).

But what is “citizenship education”?

According to the Eurydice Brief on Citizenship Education at School in Europe (2017):

“Citizenship education is a subject area which aims to promote harmonious co-existence and foster the mutually beneficial development of individuals and the communities in which they live. In democratic societies, citizenship education supports students in becoming active, informed and responsible citizens, who are willing and able to take responsibility for themselves and for their communities at the national, European and international level”.

The role of school and eTwinning

Based on the definition above, citizenship education requires action-oriented teaching and learning approaches that can spark pupils' interest and curiosity and enable them to actively engage and critically reflect (European Commission, 2023). Through the eTwinning community, teachers and schools, by fostering cross-cultural collaboration, can encourage mutual understanding, respect, and active participation in democratic processes. ETwinning enhances awareness of cultural diversity and shared European heritage, but also and equips teachers and students with skills for responsible, inclusive global citizenship.

ETwinning, projects the the aim of quality education, that according to the Council of Europe (CM/Rec \(2012\)13) should target for the multifaceted goals of education, such as preparing youth for both democratic citizenship and economic participation, fostering personal growth and societal engagement, and developing foundational skills like language, numeracy, and cognition necessary for successful learning across subjects.

The purpose of the workshop

Recognising the pivotal role that schools play in shaping young minds and fostering democratic values, this event will focus on equipping early childhood education and primary education teachers with the knowledge, strategies, and resources needed to effectively integrate citizenship education into their teaching practice. By empowering teachers to foster self-awareness, civic engagement, and inclusivity, we aim to cultivate a generation of responsible and active citizens who will shape a brighter future for all.
